Parliament Dissolved

Ghana Premier Overthrown By Colonel in Bloodless Coup

ACCRA, Ghana, Jan. 13 (AP) .- Army officers seized power in Ghana, apparently without bloodshed, early today, overthrowing one of the few parliamentary democracies left in black Africa.

The coup members, led by Lt. Col. I. K. Acheampong, 40, told Ghanalans in a nationwide broadcast that the constitution has been suspended, political parties ban-ned and Parliament dissolved. The surport was closed, but reopened a few hours later while all normal communications with the outside world were cut. The cable office and the Ghana News Agency were under armed guard. The coup came while Prime

There was no word that army garrisons in other parts of Ghana had joined the comp leaders in Accra and there was no mention of arrests, but members, of parliament were urged to check in with army authorities "for their own safety."

Devaluation Review The new government said it will review the unpopular devaluation and study a 5 percent rural development levy on salaries and other controversial measures by the Busia government. No other details were immediately available. .

The new ruler, Col. Acheampong, is the acting commander of the 1st Infantry Brigade, the largest concentration of troops in the Accra area.

There was little evidence of military activity in central Accra, but thunderous cheers could be heard throughout the town as busineds of workers roared their support for the take-over. The downtown areas were crowded as usual, and peaceful. One of Mr. Busia's last official acts was to be host to Prezident Nixon's wife, who came to Ghana Jan: 5 for a two-day visit as part of her three-nation West African tour.

It was becoming increasingly clear that Ghana's lonely experiment with democracy in a continent controlled by army strongmen and one-party regimes was being seriously thwarted by a staggering economy. The Ghana economy has been

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (WP).-President Nison announced today that the number of American troops in Victnam would be cut in half between Feb. 1 and May 1—from a ceiling of 133,000 to $3,027. In his seventh troop-withdrawal announcement, the President said that 70,000 troops would be brought home by May 1 and that the rate of withdrawal would be the most rapid to date.

The withdrawal rate in the next three months will average 2.300 men a month, compared to the 2,500-man monthly rate in the period ending Feb. 1. "There will be another announcement that will be made before May 1 with regard to a further withdrawn!," Mr. Nixon said in a brief statement he made to reporters in the White House press room.

If the new rate were maintained after May 1, all American forces would be out of Vietnam by Aug. 1, three months before the

33 British Scientists Warn of Ecological Doom

By Anthony Lewis

LONDON, Jan. 13 (NYT) ---Britain must soon stop building roads, tax the use of power and raw materials and take measures that will eventually cut its population by half. Those are examples of the proposals in a "blueprint for survival" put forward today to avoid world ecological catastrophe. It was supported by 33 leading British scientists.

"If current trends are allowed to persist," they said, "the breakdown of society and the irreversible disruption of the life-support systems on this planet—possibly by the end of the century, certainly within the lifetimes of our children-are inevitable."

Instead of industrialization and growth, the statement said, man's aim should now be "a stable society." It would be characterized by steady or declining population, decentralised living and strict limits on the use of resources.

A detailed program for reachgist. The editors and consultants prepared the "blueprint"

A statement of support was signed by the 33 scientists, who said each agreed with the basic principles if not every detail Among them were Sir Julian Huxley, the biologist; C.H. Waddington, professor of animal genetics at the University of Edinburgh, and V.C. Wynne-Edwards, Regius professor of natural history at the University of Aberdeen and chairman of the government's Natural Environment Research

Sir Frank Fraser Darling, vicepresident of the Conservation Poundation of Washington, introduced the blueprint at a news conference. His 1969 Reith Lectures for the British Broadcasting Corporation were a highly influential environmental statement

He called the blueprint "the ing that goal was set out in 22 sanest popular statement" he had pages of the magazine The Ecoloseen on the environmental crisis facing man. He said he had found nothing "over dramatic"

> "We are not fortunate in the amount of time left to us," he added. "We cannot think of it in linear fashion—as if the next 1,000 years would be like the last 1,000.

The blueprint emphasized this same point, arguing that the demand on resources and food and the impact on the environment were multiplying—with the result that the increases keep getting larger and larger.

For example, a chart in the blueprint showed the curves of present oil production and reserves. They start moving toward each other gently, but then curve sharply until demand exceeds supply by the year 2000. The paper argues that it is hard to see the threat because the increased demand comes in a rush, growth rate to persist" on a worldwide basis, the statement says, "total ecological demand will increase by a factor of 32 over the next 66 years."

"Accommodating the pressures arising from such growth," it continued, "can be done only at the cost of disrupting ecosystems and exhausting resources, which must lead to the failure of food supplies and the collapse of

An unusual social argument in the paper is that the trend toward increased capitalization is feading toward great unemployment. More capital, it said, has to be raised for each job. As an example, Edward Gold-to the South Vietnamese. "Wa are now turning over the air and logistics responsibilities," he said, adding that it is "going forward on schedule or ahead of

Questioned about the ability of the South Vietnamese to with-stand future attacks, Mr. Laird said that the Communists could be expected to launch "two or three spectaculars" with the kind of forces they have. But he said that both he and Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, are confident that the South Vietnamese can handle the situation.

Three-Fourths Sure "I do not guarantee that the South Vietnamese will win every battle," Mr. Laird said, "but 75

The South Vietnamese "have the capability, they have the equipment, they have the train-always apparent in the South Vietnamese Army. Mr. Laird also spoke optimistically of progress being made in the Cambodian Army, which he called "the fastest-growing army in the history of the world, going COPENHAGEN, Jan. 13 (AP). Eing Frederik was still cling-ing to life tonight, but a medical bulletin said the 72-year-old monarch was in a coma and his condition was very grave.

The king, in the third day of a crisis following a relapse on Tuesday, remained isolated in the coronary ward of Copenhagen's Municipal Hospital Queen Ingrid 62, Princess Mar-

However, Queen Ingrid made two visits to the hospital. This latest bulletin said: "There has been no decisive change in His Majesty's condition during the day. Because of the state of unconclousness it must be considered very grave."

MOSCOW, Jan. 13 (NYT). — A tion with Mr. Chakovsky in an politically prominent Soviet writer was reported today to have suggested that Moscow would relax its restrictions on political dissidence and emigration if Western radio stations beamed toward the Soviet Union ceased what he described as anti-Soviet propaganda.

The unusual proposal was made by Alexander B. Chakovsky, editor of the authoritative weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta, in a threehour talk last week with Rep. James H. Scheuer, a New York

"If you change those broadcasts, then we will change the way we bandle dissidents and those who want to emigrate," the 58-year-old writer was quoted as

Since assuming the leadership of Literaturnaya Gazeta in 1962. Mr. Chakovsky has made it one of the more stimulating Soviet publications, combining a conservative view on literary policy with a refreshingly reformist stance on social issues, from population to polintion problems. Rep. Scheuer, who is Jewish, said he had requested the talk with Mr. Chakovsky, which took place in the editor's office Jan. 4, to make a plea for better treatment of political dissenters in the Soviet Union and for Soviet Jews who wish to emigrate to Israel. I told him that I was a Jewish congressman from a largely Jewish district—the Bronx," Rep. Scheuer recalled, "and that my constituents, many other Americans and all members of Congress were concerned over the treatment of Jews by the Soviet government.

Loss of Prestige

"I also pointed out that the Soviet Union, a country of great power and moral authority in the world, was suffering a needless loss of prestige by imprison-ing dissidents. Such actions, I said, are holding back public support in the United States for progress toward detente between our two countries."

According to the congressman, Mr. Chakovsky said he was "not an expert" on dissidents and was not familiar with specific cases. #### South Passes North for 1st Time In Rate of School Desegregation

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (WP).-This year, for the first time, a smaller proportion of Negro children attend totally segregated schools in the South than in the North or West, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare reported

In the 31 states of the North and West. 11 percent of black pupils attend all-black schools, while in 11 Southern states the figure was 9 percent. In the border states, which include Maryland and the District of Columbia, 24 percent of black pupils attend segregated schools. The figure rose from last year, unlike the other regions.

Last year was the first time that the annual government figures showed the South beginning to overtake the North and West in desegregation. The extensive segregation in the border region-Delaware, Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma, West Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia—was ascribed to the increasing Negro population of the large cities of the region. Excluding Washington, where the school population is 95 percent black overall, 21 percent of Negro children in border states attend segregated schools, nearly twice the national average. In the whole country, the survey showed that about a third of Negro pupils attend majority-white schools. In the North and West. 28 percent do so. In the South, this figure has rism from 18 percent in 1985 and 39 percent in 1970 to 44 percent this year.

-After 20 years of shipping In-dians to the melting pot of Amer-ican cities, the federal govern-fairs would diminish. Instead, the program has helped create "Indian ghettos" in "destination cities" such as Los Angeles, the San Francisco Bay area, Danver, Chicago and Cleve-land. These became centers for Indian militancy.

At least 40,000 bolted home to their reservations, according to the bureau. Many made the round trip several times. Among Indians, relocation reportedly has been a hitter joke. They saw it as consistent with the Eisenhower administration's "termination" policy, which attempted to make reservations self-sufficient, ending federal support.

The Kennedy and Johnson administrations renounced "termination" and began recruiting industrial plants for reservations, but the relocation continued. Last year, more than 10,000 Indians were relocated for training—and at least half returned home.

Ernest Stevens, an Oneion who is the bureau's new director of economic development, said Indians used to joke about relocation and the space program. "We figured they ought to have Indian astronauts because no matter what went wrong. Indians would always find a way to get home."

would first have to hold a special hearing to determine whether it was voluntarily given. If so, it could then be read to the jury.

What standard judges should follow in deciding whether confessions were voluntary was left undecided. Some lower courts concluded that the judge must be persuaded of the confession's voluntariness beyond a reasonable doubt—the same level of proof that is required before a defendant can be found guilty.

Other judges held that high harriers should not be erected against the submission of evidence to juries and that judges could admit confessions if the weight of the evidence indicated that the confessions were voluntary.

The issue was brought to the Supreme Court by Don Richard Lego, who is serving a 25-to-60year prison term for armed rob-bery in Illinois, where courts folself-incrimination. He added that defendants could not demand that julies reconsider whether confessions were involuntary, but only whether, in view of all the circumstances, they were reliable. The dissenters' opinion, written by Justice Brennan, said that be-cause the Supreme Court ruled in 1970 that guilt must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, conssions should not be admitted unless the prosecution can bear the same burden of proof in show-

The Metropolitan Solution

The civil rights movement in the United States did not begin with the Warren Court's opinions on school desegregation. But those opinions, affecting as they did one of the most sensitive areas of racial contact, set off a chain of events and a trend of opinion that went far beyond the simple question of whether a black child might sit beside a white in school.

Similarly, the ruling of Judge Robert R. Merhige jr., ordering the school district of Richmond, Va., to be merged with those of two adjoining, suburban countles will, if sustained by the Nixon court, have effects that go far beyond linking the schools of the inner city with those of the suburbs. The primary impact will be to mingle the stodents of schools which were previously predominantly black with predominantly white, because they were situated in neighborhoods that had that racial cast. But it will also affect the funding and control of schools, and move, markedly, toward metropolitan solutions for the Ills of American

The characteristic foundation of the American public school system is the local district and the local property tax. The property tax, as a basis for school support, has already been attacked in a California court decision. The "neighborhood" school district is now attacked by Judge Merhige. Together, these trends could result in an entirely new basis for the public schools or at least a sharp increase of present state responsibilities in that field.

But it might also well move toward metropolitan solutions for such urban problems as the flight of individual and corporate taxpayers from the high costs of city government, and a reorientation of transit facilities. For busing is essential if school districts are widened, and it would doubtless be more efficient in many cases to improve mass transportation generally between city and suburhs than to set up a bus system for schools alone.

There are sure to be many objections to the implications of the Richmond decision. Not only will the largely white suburbanites object to be followed out of the city by the problems they sought to escape, but the larger districts will dilute not only racial predominance in the schools but local influence in the school systems. This will also be resented by, among others, the blacks who have won preponderant influence in ghetto schools.

Efforts to break up the ghettos by scattering low-cost housing projects in middleincome and high-rent areas, have already encountered opposition not only from the original residents, but from ghetto residents who believe that what is needed is not to eradicate the ghettos, but to improve them. leaving the racial complexion of the various city neighborhoods unchanged. The friction between two black organizations the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and NEGRO (National Economic Growth and Reconstruction Organization) is over the NAACP's endorsement of scatter-site housing.

Thus there is no single, universally accepted path, either to sound racial relations or the cure of the city aliments so closely associated with that problem. But there is movement, there is innovative thinking and action. And therefore there is hope, amid the crowding confusions and conflict.

Sen, Edmund Muskie is cautious, indecisive, noncommittal, even a little bland, as we all know because for more than a year the political commentators have been telling us so. So how do you explain the fervor with which he has plunged into the first week of his presidential campaign in New Hampshire, the blunt terms in which he is now talking, the almost evangelical tone? You explain it, if you are a political commentator, by proclaiming a new Muskle (as in new Nixon or new Humphrey)—a man suddenly grown bold, if not reckless, in his readiness to risk all in the early running, a man now prepared, where he wasn't before, to speak out sharply and clearly on the war and the economy and all the rest.

Well, maybe the man has changed, or maybe it's only a change in tactics that marks the difference. Whether the real a lot of people in his tough, sharp television appearance at the close of the 1970 congressional campaign, or the one who disappointed most of the same people with his lackluster performance in his televised announcement of his candidacy last week, or the one now parastorming New Hampshire-whether any of these are the real Muskie we are not prepared to say. What does strike us, however, is that when you leave style aside and examine content on just one issue, or perhaps just one crucial aspect of a vital issue, there is a refreshing realism, good sense, candor, and, yes, consistency which suggests that in a very fundamental sense Sen. Muskie hasn't changed all that much over the last four or five years, at least. As evidence, we would offer the senator's statement on Vietnam. * * *

It begins with a confession of errorsomething we are not hearing all that frequently from other candidates. There can be no denying, obviously, that Mr. Muskie had quite a different view of Vietnam before, and even after, he joined Sen. Humphrey on the Democratic ticket in 1968. Bot so, of course, did almost all the other Democrats who are now in the presidential race: the difference is that, except for Sen. Mc-Govern, they aren't exactly trumpeting that fact. What is even more distinctive about the position now taken by the senator from Maine, however, is his willingness now to accept out loud all the real implications of his present policy, including the most critical implication of a policy of total American withdrawal from the war-the one that concedes that this country's capacity to control what happens next will be very nearly nil. Sen, McGovern indicated in an interview with this newspaper's editors the other day that while he was saying something of the sort as a candidate, he would not be prepared as President to say that the ultimate outcome doesn't matter-that he would think it but he wouldn't want to say it. To his credit, Sen. Muskie is saying without reservation that it cannot matter because we won't be able to influence the course of events and that the country ought to begin facing up to that.

More important, perhaps, Sen. Muskie is willing to begin bracing the American public for the possibility that the worst will hap pen, that as our influence diminishes, and the fate of Vietnam becomes increasingly a matter for the Vletnamese, both North and South, to settle one way or another, everything we have invested in the war will be lost—the lives, the money, the time. "All this will have no effect upon the resolution of these political probes when that time comes because it simply isn't possible for this country, powerful as it is. . . to settle the political problems" of Vietnam, he says. "The result when it comes may run counter to what we have been trying to do for the last five years," he adds, urging us to confront the hard fact that in this event all our efforts "would have been wasted."

This is not likely to be a popular theme. Bot it does have the singular merit of realism as well as of some consistency. It is interesting to note that Sen. Muskle, even while supporting the war effort in early 1968, was warning that "Neither side can expect to achieve at the conference table what it might have hoped to achieve with a military victory . . . each side . . . will have to accept some risk which it will seek to make minimal, that (a settlement) may not work out as planned."

So there is a track record here for frankness and for facing up to harsh realities and it is refreshing to find it in the face of the many glib promises now being offered of withdrawal without pain from the Vietnam war.

Norway and the EEC

The Norwegian government has almost no alternative but to accept the community's offer substantially as it stands, or to reject it and thus break off negotiations. There can be no doubt that the government is facing a most critical decision. Jean Monnet used to advise the Battah: "Sign now and negotiate later," and while this advice could not be literally followed, it is significant that all the major problems for the United Kingdom-Commonwealth sugar, New Zealand butter and fishing-have effectively been solved by being postponed, for a further decision at a later date.

Realpolitik in Sports

By C. L. Sulzberger

DARIS-On the eve of the February Winter Olympic Games at Sapporo, Japan, it is appropriate to consider the proposition that 1972 should be the last year in which international sporting events are divided into categories of "amateur" and "professional."

Is it not time for the world to recognize how much society has evolved since the 19th century when these distinctions were initially fostered? A decision should be taken by the Inter-national Olympic Committee and all similar groups making future competitions "open" rather than restricted.

Already, as the Prench journalist Philippe Labro points out, many of those who will compete at Sapporo are not really amsteur in the old-fashioned sense. In Communist countries their athletic ability is financed by the state through the armed services or nationally-owned factories. In the West they are often sided by universities and clubs, by gifts from wealthy supporters or by dublous devices involving payment of travel bills.

Different Systems

Obviously it is ridiculous for the Olympic committee to ask Communist states to change their social systems to conform to outmoded competitive standards of the West. It is also stlly to ask Western athletes to compete with those from Marxist lands who train all year round unless the former have a means of financing their livelihood while train-

French Chateau To Stay Property Of Owners' Kin

PARIS, Jan. 13 (AP) -A Paris is court today decided that the 16th-century chateau of Chenonceaux, in the Loire Valley. should remain the property of the family that has owned it since 1913 The question of ownership came up as a result of a tangle in the wills of Antoins and Hubert Menier, who made their fortune processing chocolate.

The two brothers put their real estate holdings into a corporation in 1955, with Antoine Memer holding a 75 percent interest. One of the clauses provided that if either brother died without heirs, the other brother or his heirs could exercise an option to buy up the other shares. When Antoine Menier died without heirs in 1967, he willed his 75 percent interest to La Demeure Historique, an association devoted to protecting historic monuments. La Demeure Eistorique took the case to court when the widow and two children of Hubert Menter, who died in 1959, sought to buy up the majority interes The appeals court ruled in favor of the Menier family. The Menier brothers had invested heavily in restoring and maintaining the chateau, and in recent years, an influx of visitors had made the corporation profitable.

62 IRA Suspects Arrested; Gunmen Slay Ulster Soldier

BELFAST, Jan. 13 (Reuters) .-British troops arrested 62 men in Northern Ireland early today in a hunt for suspected members of the Irish Republican Army.

All but seven were picked up in Roman Catholic areas of Belfast. The others were arrested outside the city.

Army officers said the roundup was conducted as a result of tip-offs, which they said demonstrated general disenchantment among ordinary Catholics with the IRA.

The arrested men were handed over to the police for questioning. After the interrogation, authorities will decide which ones will be interned without trial.

The 211th victim of Northern Ireland violence was slain today when gunfire from a speeding car killed Maynard Crawford, a Protestant member of the paramili-tary Uster Defense Regiment, as he was driving a panel truck in the Belfast suburb of Whiteabley, an area previously free of sectarian violence.

Protest in London

In London, a protest against the whole policy of interment was Ismoched by the National Council for Civil Liberties.

A pamphlet issued by the council said internment rides roughshod over civil liberties and that "while Northern Ireland is a part of the United Kingdom, the same standards of liberty should apply."

The council held a press conference at which a 33-year-old Northern Ireland Catholic complained that he had been beaten and threatened with a firing smad while under detention for 36 hours.

The man, Desmond Holly, said be was taken from his home at 4 a.m. on Jan. 2 and released at 4 p.m. the following day. He said he had to sit in a small cubicle for about 30 hours and was punched in the ribs by interrogators who threatened to have him shot.

Council secretary Tony Smythe said he was examining the pos-sibility of legal action to obtain compensation for wrongful arrest. He said that putting internment powers into the hands of Northern Ireland politicians was "like putting a machine gun into the hands of Hell's Angels."

A man shot dead late last night shortly after two feuding IRA wings joined in a sharp gun battle with British troops, was identified today as Raymond Denham, 43, a part-time police officer, and an electrician. He was shot at work in the Roman Catholic district Two armed men held up a gateman at a printers' shop, walked in and gunned him down. Police sources believe Mr. Denham, a Protestant, was hit by an IRA execution squad. The IRA's militant "provisional" wing said in Dublin that at least one British serviceman has been killed and another 30 wounded in the last five days in attacks that have not been publicized by the British.

Drive to Save UN $6 Million Is Under Way

Austerity Program Centers on Salaries

By Kathleen Teltsch UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. Jan 13 (NYT). - Secretary - General Kurt Waldheim has begun an austerity campaign aimed at sav-ing 55 million for the financially tropoled United Nations.

In a memorandum sent to 20 department heads, he indicated that the chief cost-cutting would be in salaries. These account for roughly 75 percent of the UN's budget of $313,124,410 for 1972. There is no intention of firing staff members, UN sources said. but rather of not automatically filling vacant posts.

international staff now totals 8,327, with additional workers taken on temporarily during peak periods of activity such as the 13-week General Assembly session each fall. Outsiders are also brought in as consultants throughout the year.

The new austerity program aims to reduce the number employed hoth categories and to cut overtime costs except in such emergencies as weekend or night meetings of the Security Council.

The economy drive also seeks a redoction in documentation which cost $39 million in 1970.

The assembly has recommended a 15 percent cutback, involving such practices as the use of summaries instead of verbatim reports when possible.

Mr. Waldheim's budget directive also called for reducing purchases of equipment.

UN officials regard the austerity program as an urgently needed reform but do not foresce any early improvement in the orga-nization's basic financial troubles. These have been caused primarily by the refusal of some members, including the Soviet Union, to pay for peacekeeping forces because they objected to the way the operations were established or

Luns Meets Debré, Sees No Change In French Policy

PARIS, Jan. 13 (Reuters) .-NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns expressed "great satisfac-tion" with talks he held here today with French Defense Minister Michel Debré.

Mr. Luns said his luncheon talks with Mr. Debré were "wideranging and included political technical and military issues." Mr. Luns, who is here on a

Main Attraction of 'Klute' -Jane Fonda's Performance

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

DARIS, Jan. 13 (IRT).-"Klute" she cannot remember the missing (at the Normandie and the Boul Mich' in English) comes to Paris with the endorsement of New York and London critics who have voted its star, Jane Fonds, the best actress of the year. Her vehicle, written and directed by Alan J. Pakula, remembered for his film "Pockie" with Liza Minnelli, is what is termed "a psychological thriller." i.e., a detective story with a college education.

The scenario intertwines a detective tale with a psychiatric X-ray of a Manhattan prostitute. This heroine, seeming on the surface a manwise cynic and a successful virtuoso of the oldest profession, has ambitions to become an actress or a photographic model. She fails to establish ber-self as either, but she is one of the most popular call girls in

When one of her many out-oftown customers disappears from his home and some obscene notes addressed to her are found in his desk, his shocked wife and associates instigate an inquiry. man and does not even recognize his photograph, though she recalls the vile letters. Klute procceds with his mission, falling in love with the amoral lady in the process. He-with her aidsolves the mystery, after some melodramatic chases that are charged with the necessary suspense. But it is the portrait of the heroine that is the film's most arresting feature.

As the playing of the courtesan of golden heart must be the world's second oldest profession, one might expect yet another blurry photostat of its stereotyped interpretation. From Miss Fonds. however, one receives something quite different: a vigorous, consistent and sweeping performance. With remarkable histrionic cunning, she reveals the schizophrenia behind the girl's erratic behavior and the vulnerahility beneath her brittle, matter-of-fact attitude, her sly conveyance of insincere flattery, hercalculating cheating. It is a characterization, fresh and vivid and one of some psychological depth. It is meticulous in delivery, movement and facial play. but is simultaneously wonderfully alive, an almost perfect blending of craft and art.

Alan J. Pakula provides a travelogue of New York'e underworld of vice and drug dens as Klute conducts his investigation. It contains the required shock value, but it is a sideshow, the acting of Miss Fonda being the main attraction.

It is predicted that "Klute" will repeat its American success in Paris and so there will be extra midnight showings at the Normandie.

Strictly for Men (and Women)

The late President Kennedy had his shirts custom-made at Charvot's. Gen. de Ganlle, who started going to Charvet's when he became a captain in the army, always wore white shirts with navy blue initials. President Georges Pempidou comes occasionally. Henry Ringling North was there this morning.

But to the credit of Dinu Colban, also known as Mr. Charvet, he would like to reach a wider audience. That is why he has an amazing range of less expensive ready-to-wear shirts in hun-dreds of different colors and designs, available in both the old and new shops.

Alterations

To buy a shirt at Charvet's is an experience. Every new customer is confronted with a cutter. Tape measure in hand, he will tell you immediately whether you can wear, a standard size. If not, the shop will make the necessary alterations, maybe a wider collar or a shorter sleeve, free of charge.

Charvet introduced the colored shirt in France and has a range of 80 different colors. The new thing, this season, is a multi-colored irregular stripe.

Coordination A well-shirted man. Mr. Colban said, should coordinate his shirt with his tie and his profession. A banker should look like a banker and a pop singer like a pop einger. "Look at Mr. Pinay" (the Freuch economist), he said "he'll never chenge. He'll always stick to narrow ties. It's a part of his image."

"The reason so many men dully shirted," he claims, "is cause they're scared of their bosses. The minute they are b a more responsible position, the become more secure and more adventurous.

Dollar Drops To New Low Against Mark

Central Banks Seen Trying to Buy DM

FRANKFURT, Jan. 13 (AP) .-The dollar slumped below its new official deutsche mark parity for the first time today as central banks sought vainly to unload large dollar holdings on the currency market here.

The dollar closed at 3.22 DM under the official parity of 3,2225 set by the Group of Ten last month. The dollar hit an alltime low quotation of 3.218 during afternoon trading, described by dealers as hectic.

Sources ascribed the declining dollar price to attempts by some central banks to reduce their dollar holdings and take in marks instead. They said hump sums of up to $500 million were offered for sale but most buyers re-mained out of the market.

The Bundesbank did not intervene on the market. Sources said it is reliably understood that the bank will buy in support of the dollar only if it falls to its lower mandatory price of 3.15 DML

The bank is understood to be reluctant to intervene in the market, fearing its buying of dollars would trigger a massive inflow of the currency.

The dollar has been slipping in value all week here. Contributing to the decline, according to market sources, have been warnings that another currency crisis may come without a settle-ment of international trade prob-

The commission proposes to reduce this spread to a percent by sell each other's currencies to ensure that all of them are in a range of 2 percentage points around their respective dollar

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

ARD Plans Merger With Textron

Directors of American Research & Development (ARD) Curp. have agreed in principle to distribute the firm's holdings in Digital Equipment Corp. to stockholders and then merge with Textron Inc. The Textron board has approved the merger. Each ARD shareholder would get 3/4 of a share of Digital Equipment stock and 3/10 of a share of Textron, equal to about $67. ARD holds 4.6 million Digital shares, about 45 percent of the outstanding shares, valued at more than $350 million. The value of the Textron stock to be issued in the proposed merger would be about $50 million. The promerger would be about $55 million. The pro-posel is subject to approval by shareholders of both ARD and Textron and the receipt of a favorable tax ruling, the companies said. ARD is a venture capital investment company with investments in 46 companies. Textron has operations in four basic product areas—consumer. serospace, industrial and metal products.

Mobil Oil Sets Big U.S. Debt Offering

Mobil Of about Feb. 1 will offer debentures and notes totaling $300 million, the largest U.S. public debt financing by an industrial concern since 1961. The planned offering will include $200 million of 30-year debentures plus $100 million of 7 L/2-year notes. The financing again underscores a rising dependence by the U.S. oil industry on borrowed capital. Most petroleum concerns prior to the late 1960s generated the bulk of their required funds from internal sources, but they since have been forced to seek increasing outside financial help in meeting soaring costs of refineries, pipelines and ocean tankers. In 1966-70, for example, the oil industry boosted the amount of money raised in the capital markets 160 percent, while its cash earnings rose little more than 33 percent.

St. Regis Makes Paper From Garbage St. Regis Paper Co. says it sucreeded, for the first time, in making printing paper with fiber reclaimed from unsorted garbage. Its studies prove that using this reclaimed fiber is "technically feasible in papermaking and can be made economically sound under the right conditions," the company said.

Wall St. Takes Beating, But Dow Stays Over 900

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (NYT),-Prices beat a broad retreat today barrier to investors. Most new as volume fell sharply on the

New York Stock Exchange "Profit-taking," rippled the explanatory chant among the majority of analysts.
The Dow Jones industrial ever-age, which had begun to slide yesterday, tumbled 5.64 to 905.18. For the first time since Nov. 23

—when the Dow set its 1971 closing low at 797.97—the Big Board produced more than 1,000 declining issues. There were 495 advances and 1,009 declines.

Turnover dipped to 16.41 million shares from the previous 20.97 million. During the market's recent uphili rush, the volume of trading generally has contracted as prices ease. This has been hailed as a bullish indication by some analysts.

For the near term, observers will watch the market's behavior if the Dow slips closer to 900—a level with psychological and technical significance.

The big gainers on the active list were Horizoo, up 3 1/8 to 50 1/8, and American Research & Development, up 3 3/4 to 58 3/4. Textron, which is proposing to take over ARD, fell 1 1/4 to 31 1/8. The agreement calls for ARD to distribute to stockholders its holdings in Digital Equipment—down 5 to 73 1/4. The decline in its shares today presumably is related to the expectation that the public "float" in the stock promises to be increased substantially.

Tool Research & Engineering, rose 1 to 50. The stock, which ran up 6 yesterday, has beeo cited as a beneficiary of space shuttle development. Commenting on the present market, Newton D. Zinder of E. F. Hutton stated: "After seven weeks of advancing prices, the bul's are in the enviable position of being able to afford a pullback here. It would neutralize the overbought condition and in this respect would actually strengthen the market technically,"

Cincinnati Milacron slipped

9% in Outlays WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (NYT). -Business plans to increase investment in plant and equipment by 9.1 percent this year over 1971, the Commerce Department and Securities & Exchange Commission reported today. While it would not mean a hyper-boom year for this key element in the economy, the increase would be far greater than the 2 percent rise of 1971 over 1970, which was more than accounted for by higher prices. Today's report, based on surveys conducted in late November and December, did not give a quarterly breakdown of planned investment outlays, but the an-nouncement said the survey "points to rising capital spending throughout the year."

It estimated 1972 plant and equipment spending at $88.81 billion, compared with $81.47 billion in 1971.

Harold C, Passer, assistant secretary of commerce for economic affairs, said the report "in-dicates that this sector will provide a vigorous thrust to the economy this year." He emphasized that the rise would represent "a substantial real gain because . . . prices are expected to rise less repidly than in recent years."

He also found "especially encouraging" the projection of a 4 percent increase in investment by manufecturing companies following e 5 percent decline in 1971.

The most dramatic turnsround by industry was in air transportation, where a 38 percent drop in 1971 investment will be follow-ed by a planned 34 percent increase in 1972. Public utilities plan another large increase in investment outlays up 15.6 percent from 1971 and the same percentage increase as the rise in 1971 over 1970.

In all truth, isn't it a sort of self-destruction to accept without demur (as maybe you do) the dank cheerless clutch of winter cold—the winty faces of cheerless people?

So we ask you again; wouldn't you like to run away here to a place of your own in this nature-blessed country, inhabited by a peopla who deserve every bit of the beauty they've been given?

For the astonishing fact is that the Costs Rican people—paritaps like none other on earth—live in peace. All of them, each perhaps like none other on earth—live in peace. All of them, each with the other, live and work in PEACEI

Consider them, the 1% million of them: hendsome, gentle, literate, industrious and (phenomenon of our times!) kindly—a European-sprung people who are constantly embracing, shaking hands, even with strangers, a people to whom lew and order is symbolized by a smiling policeman armed with nothing more innereding than a whistle, directing traffic with a murmured "por favor." The phrasa "law and order" doesn't baye an orthous favor." The phrase "law and order" doesn't have an orninous meaning here. It's incredible for a foreigner to learn that there is no army in Costa Rica (without an army, Costa Ricans say, there is no danger of a military take-over). The only military uniforms worn are by police and there are more schools in Costa Rice than there are uniforms. Not alone more school-children or more school-teachers but actually more schools than military uniforms! Amazing! No wonder that Gov. Nelson Rockefeller. having undergone e rather stormy Latin American tour in 1968. exclaimed happily when he finally got to simpatico Costa Rica: "This perfect jewel of a country!" The NEW YORK TIMES in an editorial on February 5th, 1970 headed "Costa Rica's Example praises the solid democracy of this tiny country and says in part. "Doing what comes naturally, a half-million voters have brought off (Costa Rica's tifth successive) peaceful presidential election in twenty years."

Yet, it isn't only each other whom Costa Ricans like. There is no xenophobia here at all: foreigners are warmly welcomed and North Americans, especially, are cherished. Nearly 15,000 of us from the U.S. live and prosper in Costa Rica. English is widely spoken, and the word has been gradually slipping out that in this "rewel of a country" fles the fulfillment of the wistful dream of so many harassed Americans: the mind picture of that perfect ratest where climate and man ere in gentle harmony with each

It's rather astocishing that this spectacularly beautiful country, really not that distant from the States, is much less familiar to Americans then the Islands of the Caribbean. Almost everyone knows, and many have visited, the grouping of tropical Edens called the West Indies—their fabled greenness, the sparkling waters in which they are set. Yet Costs Rice's climate has all the balm of its island neighbors and is more exhitaratingly varied. The see that stretches along the east coast of this siender strip of Cantral America is the Caribbean. Go west less than 150 miles and there is the Pacific cowhere does this greatest of oceans wash more beautiful shores then Costa Rica's_incongruously, Central America"; still it is true that Costa Rica'e mountains are es glorious in their tropical setting as the Alps in their amblence.

And it is further a fact that these mountains eid in making the climate the delight it is. San Jose, the capital, is in the central plateau, 3500 feet above sea level, and about midway between the Caribbean and the Pacific. The city's climate is simply nothing less than perpetual Spring with the mean temperature steady at 70° every month of the year. But seen at Pacific coest sea lend a true REACHES OF MOSARDA for acceptance. level — at our BEACHES OF NOSARA, for example — even here, the mean annual temperature is only 7B degrees accompanied by humidity so low that it can't be matched by the Caribbean islands. And not to put down the exotic West Indies, there's a good deal more of Costa Rica that the islands can't match. Nature thrives on an immense essee here. Naturalists have identified 762 species of birds (in all of the United States, 130 times Costa Rica's size, there are 725 varieties). And such birds! Partridge, parrots, cuckoos, toucans along with the wrens, thrushes, prioles, finches. We have deer, raccoon, monkies. Costa Rica's soil is so fertile that Texas cattle ranchers are incredulous that what would be prized crop acreage in their state is used casually as cattle-raising land here. (It has been reported by the WALL STREET JOURNAL that Lyndon Johnson bought a ranch on the Pacific side of Costa Rica.) And what hish growth springs on the racinic side of Costa Rica.) And what hish growth springs from the soil! Great forests of majestic trees; lignum vitee can be so huge that a single tree's branches may shelter an entire herd of cattle. There are groves whose boughs bend under the weight of fruit—citrus, mangoes, bananas, coconuts. Costa Rican coffee is unparalleled, Hundreds of varieties of orchids grow wild. We produce vegetables of a size and flavor such as few North American horsewhere have seen (our postfolio if you'll continue the produce of the produce of the continue of the American housewives have seen (our portfolio, if you'll send for it, has photos taken in a market and you'll find hard to believe those giant radishes and scallions).

Costa Rica has a record of steady economic progress end every foreigner who has come here is instantly aware that this progress is mounting toward affluence. Clearly, a country of such natural richness and with so extraordinary a people, puts fresh meaning into the overworked word apportunity. Oh, opportunity is here, all right. And for none better than for North Americans. There are no restrictions against private investment and the list of American businesses, small and large, is long. For you who simply want to ratire, there are special privileges if you are not a Costa Rican, all you have to prove is a guaranteed income not a Costa Rican, all you have to prove is a guaranteed income of $325 monthly for you and your wife and you ere exampt from paying taxes. San Jose has everything—for the soul as well as the storact. Opera, symptomy, splendid movie houses, theater (its National Theater, marbled end migrored, is a graceful replica of L'Opera in Paris). Many doctors and surgeons are from U.S. medical schools; the hospitals are excellent. You can buy any thing in the handsome shops and the cost of living is joyfully low. T-bone steak, eggs, vegetables, fruits are far below U.S. prices. An elegant Spanish architectural 3 bedroom house can presently be constructed for less than $10,000, and a live-inmaid and a gardener will service it at a combined monthly wage of $80 for both. Education is a positive obsession in Costa Rica, There are 2,379 elementary schools with 350,000 children attending, and 112 high schools, art academies, business schools, etc. The beautiful complex of the University of Costa Rica has an earothment of 12,000 students. And the academic standing of the English language private schools is very high. The most prestiguous of these accommodates North American children at a tuition of $38 a month. And that includes busing to and from school! San Jose has a fine airport, one of the largest, most convenient and modern in Central America, and the jet flight from Miami via LACSA or TACA takes about 2½ hours end presently costs $182 round trip. For the auroust the drive from the States along the Pan American Highway is a memorable one; south of Cartago in Costa Rica, the famous road climbs to its highest elevation—10,931 feet.

So it had to happen: Here we were, a group of Americans—i lend developers. We'd heard of Costa Rica end we came here, instantly to be entranced by its beauty and won by its people. We knew quite soon—almost like the original Spanish discoverers who gave it the name "rich coest"—that this was the country we'd been looking for. All that remained now was to find the quintessential tract of land that had everything—natural loveliness, serenity, climate, beaches. We found it. We found it in the ness, serenity, climate, beaches. We found it. We found it in the peninsula of Nicoya directly on the Pacific. And we named this tranquil place . . . BEACHES OF NOSARA. . . .

We've employed many superlatives in this ad-maybe, you'll suspect, even extravagances. Yet at the risk of once more stretching your bounds of credibility, we say this: that nowhere in the world will you find more glorious beaches than the two miles. of beautiful white sand and unimaginably clean, clear sea that front our property. There is one section that is modestly compared to the best surfing Hawaii has to offer; and, wonderfully for the less edventurous, there is a long piece where the see is quiet and where even infants can play in the water as it rolls gently onto the sand. If you're e shell collector you'll find, day senty onto his saint. If you're a shell conector you'll find, day after day, specimens you've never before seen. And out from shore are the boating and the skin diving, the fishing. A world of fish, a treasure-house for you, if that's your passion: tuna, dolphin, wahoo, grouper, snapper—the whole catalog, believe it. How rare to discover that today—e pure sea teeming with healthy fish. Yes, as much as anything it was the ocean and the beaches that caused us to choose NOSARA.

But then one turns his back on the Pacific and looks out at the land and isn't that something to see—this rich-soiled, lushlytand and san't that something to see—this rich-solled, lushly-covered sculpture of hills and valleys! It is big.—3300 acres—but we intend to convert only e part of it to homesites. We've brought in ecologists and other scientists to help us preserve the natural beauty of this place. We have laid about 35 miles of horseriding trails, all within the boundaries of our property. If a precious tree stands in the way of e buildozer the tree stays; we bend the road around it. It it's to be e match-up between "progress" and nature wa'll ride with the trees and the high.

But of course we've brought in the machines and used them?

Every site in BEACHES OF NOSARA fronts a road. Every home is gueranteed sectricity and pure delicious water. We hope to build superb golf course with 9 holes to be completed next year in 1973 and we expect to build the first of our tennis courts shortly. We've built e charming hotel with club facilities and an airfield to bring you here quickly from San Jose.

We're not new to this profession. Wa've been developers in the West Indies end we do eppreciate those magical islands. But this is the simple truth: no island in the Caribbean can claim what we have in this ad. And when one realizes that some improved sites in the West Indies have now soared to fantastic prices—that one dollar a square foot, $10,000 for a quarter-acre is now becoming the rula, then BEACHES OF NOSARA becomes almost too good to be true. For the price of our homesites is only 40c. a square foot, $4900 for a quarter-acre, 4% down and 2% a month, with no incarest charges: And that includes roads, electricity, water, one year free golf membership and the unlimited use of the natural paradise that we've inherited and are pre-enving for you. We're running out of space and there's so much more to tell you. Some of you may visit us after reading this message. Most cannot. For those we have prepared e thick portfolio. It includes a large color brockure, maps, house plans, and e 96 page condensation of Prof. Donald Lundberg's authoritative book "COSTA" RICA." All this is FREE.

Our portfolio elso tells you how to go about reserving a home-site in BEACHES OF NOSARA and spells out our money-back guarantees: an unconditional 60 day deposit refund warranty; and e full year after signing contract to visit the property and see for yourself whether it delights you. If not, every penny you'd have paid in is refunded without a word.

We're quite certain that we have something very special in BEACHES OF NOSARA and we elready know that the response to our advertising is going to be quite lively. We sincerely urge you —if you wish to be in time for the choice lots—to fill out and mail the coupon right away. Our portfolio is free and you are under no obligation at all. Indeed, no one will ever phone you or call on you. It's only the mailman you'll see.

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

The world's biggest bridge cruise, numerically speaking, departed from New York last Saturday. Three hundred sixty-five enthusiasts sailed on the Anna Maria bound for the Caribbean. This "Goren" cruise is conducted by 13 experts and directors headed by Harold Ogust of New York.

Ogust emerged from semi-retirement last month to play in a knockout team championship in Las Vegas. He sat South on the diagramed deal.

East-West were using their own version of the Blue Team Club, and the opening bld showed 13 to 17 points. In partnership methods a minimum hand, 13 or 14 points, necessitates a club bid.

East could not respond two dismonds, which would have had a conventional meaning, so he passed Most South players would be content to bid two hearts at this point, but this player was looking for a swing. He jumped aggressively to three hearts, and

THE BRASS RING

By Bill Mauldin, Norton, 276 pp. Illustrated, $7.95.

Reviewed by Stephen Hess

EVER since 1747, when a Phila-delphia printer named Benjamin Franklin drew a crude design captioned "Non Votis," editorial cartoonists have played a spirited and useful role in the public life of the United States. Their proper function has been, in the words of Walt Kelly, that of the watchdog, "to growl warn-ings, to bark, to surmise that every strange footfall is that of a cat, to worry about birds, and to suspect unknown insects."

One of the best of these watchdogs has been Bill Mauldin, now of the Chicago Sun-Times, whose cartoons appear in the Inter-national Herald Tribune. On any given day over the past two decades some other cartoonist may have been more forceful or outraged. But with the possible exception of Herblock, none has been as consistently forceful and outraged. (Herblock has a more finely-attuned killer instinct: Mauldin is a superior draftsman.)

North had more than enough Daily, almost instantly, an edipoints to go to game.
West led the heart ace and, torial cartoonist is called upon to produce an idea, a drawing, and a moral that illustrates some after studying the dummy, shifted to the ace and another diapolitical, economic, sociological, mond. East won with the king psychological, or cultural point of and made the normal play of the moment. It is a prodigious task. C.D. Batchelor, a very good returning a spade.

However the bidding and defense had made it clear to Ogust cartoonist who once drew for the New York Daily News, has written that the spade king was on his that "a political cartoonist should have in him a little of the clown, left, so he put up the ace of spades and ran five more rounds the poet, the historian, the artist, of trumps to reach this position: and the dreamer."

Yet how is such a heady combination created? The question is even more intriguing when it is realized that almost all great cartoonists have been virtually unschooled, either in art or another academic discipline. (Manidin's formal training consisted of a single year at the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts and his knowledge of the history of his chosen profession came from a passing acquaintance in the Army.)

Thus a book on "The Making of a Cartoonixt" by a leading practitioner should have been of considerable instruction.

"The Brass Ring," subtitled "A Sort of a Memoir," covers a 10-rear period: growing up in the rural poverty of New Mexico, art student in the big city. Stateside Army training, the Italian cam-paign during World War II, and finally the author's return to civilian life at age 23 with a purple heart and a Pulitzer prize. Mauldin has the odd knack of writing about poverty and war with unfailing good humor, even charme. While he doesn't spell it out, his story reflects some-thing essentially optimistic about a nation whose lower- and lowermiddle classes, urban and rural, produce Bill Mauldins, James Mauldin appears to be blessed with total recall; he remembers the punch lines of jokes (even bad jokes) he must have heard over 30 years ago. His writing is peppered with reminiscences (and home photographs) of picaresque characters, like Uncle Billy and Brother Sid, who will never make it in "The Dictionary

yes, even Presidents and Vice-of American Biography." The result is to leave the reader with feeling. Above all, Maukin is whale of a story-teller. As me would expect of the create of "Willia and Joe," he is in a comby himself when it comes to spinning Army tales. And to the end when the irreverent boy co-toonist is summoned little George S. Patton, only the man authoritarian-minded could be

rooting for the general

This is Mauldin's second look about his early life. For one who has barely turned 50, he obvious finds it a subject of considerable fascination. Yet, strangely he repeatedly pulls back from reveal. ing much of what's going on in-side, preferring to dismiss, his motivations as merely brush a motivations. Typical is the way he quickly passes over his relations with his first wife, "a milficult subject, even after all time Years...

Since Mauldin's book is to taining, it may be unjust to fault him for not writing thoroughly pleasant and enterhim for not writing another sort of memoir. However, Mauldin has been given the opportunity to write about his childhood precisely because he is now a great cartoonist; it is the factors that produced this cartoonist that are historically important. Perhaps Mauldin is not ready to write this book. Or perhaps all that can be said of the ingredients that go into the recipe were said at the turn of the century by Frederick Richardson: "It is lucky (for the cartoonist) that he is born and not made, for the making would be a laborious pro-

Triumph in Slalom Gets Britt Lafforgue * An Olympic Berth

By Bernard Kirsch

BADGASTEIN, Austria, Jan. 13 (IET).—Britt Lafforgue finished what she started today and now will be able to continue all the way to Sapporo, Japan. This is a stop, oddly enough, that was not on the schedule of one of the world's leading women slalom specialists. It had been a depressing year for the freckled-faced skier, who was born into the sport. Her French father and Swedish mother were medal winners in the world championships in the late 1930s. In 1870, her sister Instit won the world title in the slalom but a year In 1970, her sister Ingrid won the world title in the slaion but a year later broke her leg and there was only Britt to carry on the family

Last year she scored 70 World Cup points in the slalom and tied for the lead with Canadian Betsy Chifford. But that was all until today, and the future said nothing about the Winter Olympics in Sapporo next month.

The 23-year-old Miss Lafforgue earned her place on the powerful

The 33-year-old Miss Lafforgue earned her place on the powerful French team today when she won the World Cup slalom here, finishing fifteen one-hundredths of second ahead of teammate Françoise Macchi in the two-heat event. Third was Austria's American Freel, who trails Miss Macchi in the cup standings, 176-153.

Any of the 80 starters who finished today's race placed in the top 20 because that's all that completed both runs. Heat No. 2 was the knockout as 32 skiers were stopped. Three of the first four girls to start were victims at gates placed just before the finish line. The bamboo poles there were clustered tightly together and the skiers came into them rapidly—which meant that they had to be extremely quick in turning. If not their skies would clip a pole and extremely quick in turning. If not, their skis would clip a pole and they'd go flying. Unless, of course, a competitor maneuvered slowly, being happy just finishing the race.

Miss Lafforgue did not play it safe. She knew she couldn't because head French coach Jean Béranger "told me he had not gelected me yet" for Sapporo. She finished the second heat around 44 gates in 36.5 seconds for the run's fastest time. Her first-heat clocking around 41 gates was 37.30—seventh best—and her total time

Psst, Frazier to Fight Daniels

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (NYT), Some may consider this a breach of confidence but, as TV announcer Howard Cosell would say, repertorial honesty compels the disclosure that Joe Frazier is about to defend the heavyweight championship of the world against Terry Daniels, a former defensive back on the Southern Methodist freshman football team who does needlepoint

The happening is scheduled for Saturday night in New Orleans, so the chances are we will all read a number of references to Daniels in the llon's den this week. In a free country, nothing much can be done about this.

A new promotional group called Century Telenew promotional group called Century Telesports Network reasoned that, because Saturday night is the eve of Super Bowl VI, New Orleans would be crawling with football fans eager to pay $100 a seat to view the heavyweight champion in the flesh. In all probability, visitors fascinated by flesh will find it in Bourbon Street and not in any fight club. Yet no metter and not in any fight club. Yet no matter how hig an egg the show lays at the wox office, the champion almost surely will have the hig-gest gallery he has ever drawn.

Sold to Television

Century Telesports has sold this match for home television in every major market except San Francisco. Frazler has never boxed on

There is pleasant irony in the fact that this $250,000 engagement that's Frazier's guarantee—will have far more witnesses than his $5-million performance with Muhammad Ali.

"Yeb, now about that?" the champion said on the telephone. This a good thing the tele-vision people are doing, give the people a chance to see what a real champion looks like. And a fighting champion. Especially the kids that can't afford a ticket, or maybe in some states they don't let you go to fights unless you're a certain age. It's good for boxing to bring this to the kids right in their home.

"And this'll be a good fight. People are saying this guy can't fight but he's had more fights than me and his record is as good as mine, and he'll be in shape."

A Generous Heart

Nothing becomes a champion more than a generous heart. It is true that Daniels, with 32 bouts, has fought more often than France. But Floyd Casey never took Joe Frazier out in two: Frazier never lost to Tony Doyle or Floyd Patterson or boxed a draw with Sonny Moore; Jack O'Halloran, who lasted two minutes with Mac Foster, never stopped Frazier in four. It was mentioned that sithough the World Boxing Association has moved Daniels up to No. 10 in its rankings, Boxing Illustrated rates Daniels No. 48 and Ring magazine doesn't mention him.

"Can't always go by ratings," France said.
"He's going for the heavyweight title and he wants it. I love my title. It's brought me a lot of wonderful things and I mean to keep it."
Frazier's tone takes on an edge whenever the name of Muhammad All comes up. He whipped All, he stuck out his chin and invited All to hit it. He is the champion, and it galls him that Ali can lord it over him and draw delighted laughter. It was mentioned that two days after the New Orleans performance, All would box an exhibition in the Westchester County Center in White Flains, N.Y.

"First I heard of it," he said coldly. "Tm not saying anything about him any more. He's just trying to keep in the public eye. If he wants to go around being a clown, I just want to see how good he makes it—I mean without me. I'm going to do a book and let the people see the real Joe Frazier."

When Frazier went into a hospital after the All match, it stirred speculation that he might never fight again.

"Yeah, you'd think I had brain damage or I was going to have both kidneys transplanted, whatever they call it. I don't see any problem. I weighed 211 the other day with a week to go. It's kind of hot down here but I'm always hot in the gym, slways smoking."

Daniels has a special incentive. He wants to win the world championship and make enough money to buy the New York Football Giants.

"He'll have to come through me first," Frazier said. "I don't want the Giants but I want to buy some other things."

This is the man who has everything. Recently he got half off on a $10,000 car and immediately spent $6,000 on white-and-gold brocade upholstery, telephones, stereo, and such. He gets paid for fighting and paid for singing.

Behind Sealed Doors

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON. - When the tough with India. He wants those President'a advisers met to ponder the complexities of India's war upon Fakistan, Prof. Kissinger, the President's man in the White House, did most of the talking. We have the records of some of those meetings; they were leaked to Jack Anderson the syndicated columnist, and later published.

The administration is chagrined. It does

Baker not like to have records of its private conferences published in the press. This is understandable. Big shots tend to let their hair down in conferences and step out of public character, expressing themselves with pungency easily misunder-stood when printed on Page One. The conferences at which the administration's national-security Bdvisers discussed our policy toward the war-these occurred while the fighting was in prog-ress—were attended by men of the sort reporters call "highly placed." The CIA director, military chiefs of staff, top-drawer State and Defense Department functionaries. Prof. Kissinger did most of the talking.

Mostly, the men who presumably had all the facts to give to the President listened while Prof. Kissinger scolded them for not snapping their hureaucracies into line faster in support of the President's order to "tilt" U.S. policy in favor of Pakistan

Well, one is aware that there may be a quibble here. Perhaps they had already given the President all the facts in an earlier conference whose record was not leaked to Anderson. But they are most certainly not giving anybody many facts when we see them here, in these mid-war meetings. Mostly, they are taking an old-fashioned chewing oot, of the kind the sergeant gives the lesser noncoms after a Saturday inspection at which the colonel has been nnhappy about shoe

Prof. Eissinger tells them he has been "getting hell every halfhour from the President" about the bureaucracy's slowness to get shoes shined, and fast. Shape up or ship out. Every boardroom commando will realize that Prof. Kissinger may just possibly be overstating the case, both to get the singgards up off their couches and, simultaneously, to hammer home the point that, after the President, he is No. 1 around this place.

This is the way you have to talk occasionally to move an organization as inertial as the national-security bureaucracy, which has a specific gravity higher than the Great Pyramid's. If Prof. Kissinger can be faulted for throwing his weight around, there is no denying that he has the weight to throw because every word being said here is being transcribed for posterity. * * *

Shortly afterward, it will be typed, duplicated and put in the mail to sundry offices in the federal warren. Knowing that it may well come to rest on the President's desk, Prof. Kissinger is unlikely to pretend to more authority here than the President will sit still for.

All this is painful and embarrassing to the government when put in the newspapers. The question then is why the gov-ernment makes and stores such precise records of what is said in the conference room.

Mania for keeping records was one of the stranger vices of the Hitler government. Perhaps it is a passion endemic to the modern bureaucratic state. Verbatim records feed vanity while providing written proof, so comforting to the bureaucratic soul, of exactly where everybody stood on every issue ever kicked around

And so we have the government presumably filling ware-houses with long-winded accounts of boardroom chatter, complete down to the boss's colorful phrases and his second banana's feeblest joke. The decisions a man makes in a conference room may be important to posterity, but that is no excuse for recording everything he says while making one.

In a conference room a man should be able to talk silly without fear of reading his worst lines in the history books.

Soviet Art in the U.S.

Culture, apparently concerned over possible Jewish Defense League activity, has called on the American people and government to protect the valuable Soviet arts and crafts exhibition which opened in the Cor-coran Gallery of Art last night.

The exhibition, containing about 1,500 ancient and contemporary items, is the largest such show to be sent abroad by Soviet authorities. It will travel to five other American cities under the Soviet-American cultural exchange program,

In a news conference at the Corcoran, Mrs. Furtseva said she hoped that this exhibition would signal an expansion in Soviet-American cultural contacts. She noted that talks on extending the 14-year-old cultural exchange program for 1972-73 will begin in Moscow next month. "In our opinion we haven't come near exhaust-ing our potentials for cultural exchange," she said.

> Soviet officials have said that the recent improvement in Soviet-American relations, highlighted by President Nixon's plan to visit Moscow in May. led to the decision to send the handsomely mounted exhibition, whose entrance is draped with a-Soviet flag and a slogan of Lenin's. "Art belongs to the

The Objects

The exhibition arrived in drab crates marked "Nye Kantovat" (roughly, "Do Not Tilt"). These crates disgorged some splendid and colorful objects: an ornate saddle used by Ivan the Terrible, a gilded silver chalice with emeralds and rubles from the Kremlin Museum, Scythian gold jewelry, old icons, rugs from Kazakhstan, Latvian tapestries, metalwork from Georgia and Estonia, ceramics from Dagestan, lace from Vologda Bnd painted clay toys from the Kirov region.

"Our aim is to show the American people the crafts and folk arts of all the Soviet Republics," Anatoly Dyushev, first secretary of the Soviet Embassy, said before the show opened. "Polk arts and crafts create new life and help to educate our people as a peaceful Com-munist society. They symbolize the friendship between all nations of our country."

In return for the current Soviet contribution, the United States is sending a show hilled as "Research and Development, U.S.A."

Reflecting the American "consumer economy," the United States show will present such items as a Princess telephone, a Fiberglas cance, a Lincoln Continental, a copying machine, a computer system, a home hair dryer, B snowmobile, and an dryer, B anownobile, and an the Hament Corporation, a Union, electric toothbrush, in addition color photography laboratory Lenin.

Asked why the United States was not sending a comparable show of arts and crafts from this country, Frank Shakespeare, director of the United States Information Agency, said the agreement between the two countries did not provide that the shows be "matched," or that all had to do with culture. Earlier United States presentations, he said, had dealt with such themes as American education, medicine, architecture and graphic arts, and the Soviet Union has shown similar exhibitions here.

The Soviet show will wind up at New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art late this year. It consists roughly nf one-half old art objects and museum pieces and one-half contemporary goods. While most of the contemporary crafts are imagi-native and well-executed, they also include items of obvious tourist appeal. Harvey Hament, president of that has worked with the Russians on photography exhibits, said that he had obtained from the Soviet government the right to market some of the contemporary items in department stores and museum gift shops here... Certain items, he said would be available for purchase at the exhibition itself. .

The Russians, who sent 18 specialists and technicisms to install the show, made sisborate plans for its display. Although the show was designed in the Soylet Union, an Alexandria, Va., firm, Design and Produc-tion, has executed bases and pedestals for the items, in red and silver. The galleries are lined with rich red carpeting.

· A large bust nf Lenin, borrowed from the Soviet delegation offices at the United Nations, is placed at the top of the Coreoran's main entrance statrease. The gallery leading off the landing is occupied by Soviet officials connected with the exhibition. Over its doorway, atop the Lemin bust, are displayed the Bags of the Soviet Union, and the quotation from Princess Anne said. It's a beautiful beast." The Shah of Iran said: "It's yours." But the British Agriculture Ministry said no soap. It all started when Anna attended the commemoration at Persepolis of the 2,500th anniversary of the founding of the Persian Empire. The princess, an accomplished equestrienne, spotted the 2-year-old colt, named Awash (Fire) and valued at $35,000, in the shah's private stables and was so smitten by the horse that the shah offered it to her as a gift. Yesterday, however, the Agriculture Ministry ruled that Awtash could not en-ter Britain because of a ban on all horses originating in the Middle East. Purther, African horse sickness is particularly prev-alent in Iran. There would simply be no possibility of au exception," said a spokesman, not even for a princess.
